Flora and Son

Having a tough time and living on the edge, Flora is constantly arguing with her son, Max. Ian, a lazy failed musician and her ex-husband is no help. Flora just wants to escape.

Finding a guitar in a skip, she gives it to Max as an attempt to make up. But only interested in making beats, he doesn't want it. Deciding to take up the guitar herself she gets lessons from Jeff online. A handsome, grounded, guy from LA, Jeff thinks she's mental. She thinks he's sexy. Through him she starts to see that there may be a new way forward - and perhaps the escape she has been longing for.

That They May Face The Rising Sun

The final novel from John McGahern, one of Ireland's greatest novelists That They May Face the Rising Sun is a powerful and poignant story following Joe and Kate Rutledge, who have returned from London to live and work among a small, rural, lakeside community near where Joe grew up.

Now, deeply embedded in life around the lake, the drama of a year in their lives and those of the memorable characters that move about them, unfolds through the rhythm of work, ritual, and the passing seasons.

Double Blind

Seven young people arrive at a remote medical facility to take part in a clinical drug trial.

The trial is supposed to be run of the mill, but from the first night no one can sleep. They stay awake for days on end without even feeling tired. On the fourth night the effects wear off, and the first to fall asleep suffers a horrific death. The others must now face the drug's terrifying side effect: if you fall asleep you die.

Trapped in the facility with all communication cut off, they must work together to escape, and somehow manage to stay awake.

Obituary

Elvira Clancy, 24, is feeling unfulfilled. She adores her job writing obituaries but when her newspaper falls on hard times, her boss tells her he is unable to keep her on the payroll and she finds herself being paid per obituary.

When she "accidentally" kills a nasty piece of work in the town, she discovers she might have an untapped bloodlust! She relishes using ever more crafty methods to kill off the town's unpleasant residents while making them look like accidents.

Unfortunately, a spanner lands in the works - the paper hires a suspicious new crime correspondent with a penchant for conspiracy theories, and she really, really likes him.

The Miracle Club

A group of working-class Dublin housewives in 1967 win a trip to Lourdes and leave their husbands behind to care for their children.

Having never even left Dublin – let alone Ireland – the journey provides our heroines the chance to let their hair down, celebrate life and delight in some sweet independence. As they confront one another and embrace their past, the women realise that the miracle they have all been looking for is right in front of them: in the strength of their friendships and unshakeable togetherness.

Feature Documentaries

The background features a dark, starry space-like pattern. A large, curved, semi-transparent shape with a blue-to-purple gradient dominates the right side of the frame. This shape is composed of several overlapping, slightly offset layers, creating a sense of depth and movement, reminiscent of a film strip or a lens flare. The overall aesthetic is modern and cinematic.

DOCUMENTARY

Mrs Robinson

A pioneering constitutional lawyer, the first female President of Ireland, the UN's first High Commissioner for Human Rights and the Chair of The Elders; iconic change-maker Mary Robinson has led an inspirational life of human rights activism. But as she approaches the age of 80, she is taking on the biggest battle of her life.

Tracking tectonic shifts in personal, political, and social values over a period of 50 years Mrs Robinson tells a cinematic story of epic battles for equality: in the courts, at the ballot box, and on the streets.

Sanatorium

Despite a war raging close by, mud treatments and electroshock therapies continue at Kuyalnik Sanatorium, an enormous 1970s brutalist building on the shores of Odessa, where a small group search for love, healing, and happiness.

People of all ages come in their thousands each summer for the Soviet-style therapeutic and wellness treatments on offer. The biggest attraction here is the mysterious mud - which is strongly believed to cure infertility, chronic ailments, and a myriad of other health problems.

Following the stories of guests and staff over a summer season like no other, the film goes beyond the sanatorium's pink and lime green corridors, to follow an assorted group of strangers, each seeking respite from their daily realities and in search of a better life for themselves.

The Flats

New Lodge, a Catholic neighbourhood in the heart of Belfast violently affected by the conflict in Northern Ireland. Today it is marked by social abandonment, yet the inhabitants have a proud sense of belonging and idealism, albeit occasionally unhinged, that can be found in their humanity and caustic humour. Once paramilitary foot soldiers as teenagers, the men's lives are now undermined by disillusionment and unemployment, like Joe, tormented by restless nights and poor health. The women, however, as always, stay busy to keep the community afloat. They have had enough of the nostalgia for "The Troubles."

I Dream In Photos

Cathal McNaughton, a Pulitzer Prizewinning photojournalist quit “the best job in the world” at the peak of his career aged just 40.

Through this intimate narrative film, we learn of his courageous work in the field in some of the world's most harrowing trouble spots. We find Cathal at a time of deep reflection. As he rebuilds personal relationships in his now almost monastic life, far from the adrenaline filled front line, he is challenged by the demons of his past.

John Behan - Odyssey

Now in his early 80s, John Behan RHA, perhaps Ireland's best-known living sculptor is as busy as ever with regular exhibitions in Ireland and overseas. Born in Dublin's north inner city, his work has always dealt with displacement of people and emigration. One of his most celebrated pieces of public sculpture is the National Famine Memorial in Co. Mayo.

In 2018 and 2019, he travelled to Athens to volunteer at Camp Eleonas, a centre for migrants and refugees, where he gave art workshops. Post pandemic he returns to Greece and looks back at his remarkable career.

Learning to Fall

After tragedy strikes, Pascal Whelan, a stuntman, swaps movie sets, chat show sword fights, and stadium tours for life alone in a battered old caravan on Omev Island, a tidal island off the west coast of Ireland. Omev, Pascal's childhood home was his "place of higher learning".

Learning To Fall is an exploration not only of Pascal's stuntman life, but also of the intrinsic connection between Pascal and Omev. We venture back and forth through their shared histories, ebbing and flowing like the tide. Two true outlier originals in a tale of wildness and serenity, peace, and upheaval. A vibrant ode to love and loss.

The Graceless Age The Ballad of John Murry

This is the story of American singer songwriter John Murry who was on the cusp of greatness after the release of his highly acclaimed album Graceless Age (2013) when his world fell apart. Addicted to heroin, creatively exhausted and suicidal, he washed up on the shores of Ireland a broken man. Now, he is ready to retrace his steps back to Mississippi into the dark heart of American life and face his demons– a neglected childhood, traumatic assault and resulting years of opioid addiction.

Stolen

After the shocking discovery that 796 babies died in the Tuam mother and baby home, this film reveals how a government inquiry was sparked into 14 further homes. Neglect, high child mortality rates and lack of burial records have emerged at several homes including Bessborough and Sean Ross Abbey.

Mothers recount the shame and secrecy attached to pregnancy outside marriage and their long struggle to be reunited with the children many of whom claim were illegally adopted and in turn adopted children reveal how they were thwarted from accessing birth records.

All The Numbers

Almost everyone has played the lottery and everyone would like to win it. When the National Lottery was launched in Ireland in 1986, a type of mania ensued with the public taking the game to their hearts. In a depressed and dysfunctional era, the technologically advanced National Lottery was one of the country's few trusted institutions, running like clockwork and dispersing funds to good causes.

All the Numbers tells the story of the man who tried to beat the Lotto system and split public opinion, dividing a nation and illustrating a country that was ready for massive change.
